

OJT & Vocational Training

In some instances job applicants cannot secure employment because they lack the skills required by the labor market. For these people we offer On-the-Job Training (OJT).

With OJT, individuals are placed in jobs with employers who are reimbursed for a portion of the new employee's training wages. Employers who participate in OJT are thus encouraged to hire workers who do not have all of the skills required by the job.

A small percentage of job applicants may require vocational training in a classroom setting. Such training must be geared toward a demand occupation that is mutually acceptable to both the agency and the customer, and is contingent upon several factors including agency funding.

Unemployment benefits no one. Corporate downsizing and industry uncertainty can put a stop to a promising career for individuals who find themselves jobless.

Well, there is one “stop” in Suffolk County that we’re quite proud of. It is the career center at the Suffolk County Department of Labor known as the One-Stop Employment Center.

One of the first in the nation to put into practice the notion that a job search can begin and end at one location, the Employment Center brings together all a job seeker needs to become re-employed. Unemployment information, job banks, career counselors and access to vocational training are just a few of the resources to be found at the Center.

This brochure highlights the rest. If you find yourself out of work or looking to advance your career, look no further than the one-stop, full service Employment Center.
